Family-style potluck celebrating 'Terra Madre' Day at Casa Eva

Join us on Sunday, December 14th at 4PM in the historic Portuguese courtyard of Casa Eva, a 300-year-old ancestral home in Colva. We will celebrate Slow Food's 'Terra Madre' Day with a joyful, family-friendly gathering centered around the iconic flavors of Goa.

We warmly welcome locals, neighbors, families, students, and children for an inter-generational potluck and invite you to bring one ready-made Goan dish to share—big or small! The sunset evening is all about sharing homemade food and oral traditions in our historic home, which we are reimagining into an evolving community space.

We'll have a small barbecue grilling local favorites, but the main event is the communal potluck table. Whether it's your family's secret vindaloo recipe, fluffy sannas, fresh pao/poi sliders, a pot of sorpotel, or dessert like bebinca or batica, your contribution is welcome!

 When: Sunday, December 14th

 Where: Casa Eva, 1st Ward, H. No. 34, Colva (behind Colva Church)

 Time: 4 - 8 PM

 Dress code: Earth-inspired colors

"Terra Madre Day is Slow Food's global day of celebration and action for food that is good, clean, and fair for all. Held every year in December, it brings together a network of farmers, fishers, Indigenous communities, cooks, activists, students, and producers who are working to preserve biodiversity and protect ecosystems. Born from the belief that food is deeply tied to culture, health, and the environment, Terra Madre Day is a moment to honor the people and communities behind our food with garden and farm visits, communal meals, educational activities, and cultural celebrations." – The Slow Food Movement
